

Shayna Acosta Bio

Shayna Acosta is a versatile and accomplished dancer, choreographer, and creative visionary based in Greenville, South Carolina. As the creative curator for Studio, Shayna combines her passion for the arts with her dedication to the community. She also serves on the board for Oral Roberts University dance program and serves as the founder/teacher of the Impossible Movement Workshop, which helps artists discover their identity and the power of their art.

With training from Dallas PowerHouse, Planet Funk, and Tulsa Ballet, Shayna's expertise spans Hip Hop, Contemporary, Ballet, Jazz, Jazz Funk, and Break Dancing. Her professional dance career includes collaborations with artists like Hanson, Israel Houghton, and the beloved VeggieTales.

As a choreographer and movement director, she has brought her creative vision to national commercials, music videos, and elite gymnastics routines. Her work has been showcased at World of Dance and Hip Hop International, earning National Choreography awards. Shayna's career as an adjunct professor has led her to teach at Oral Roberts University, Tulsa University, and Bethel Conservatory of the Arts, sharing her knowledge of Jazz Dance, Hip Hop, Contemporary, and Professional/Personal Development.

A sought-after competition judge, motivational speaker, and convention master class instructor, Shayna inspires dancers and artists worldwide to discover their unique expression and pursue the impossible.
